The Scandal at The Athletic Department: Negligence and Extreme Prejudice

Piotr Przychodzki
Editor-In-Chief

The Laurentian Athletic Advisory Committee Report looks as if it has been written entirely by the two basketball coaches, Peter Ennis and Peter Campbell, to orchestrate public opinions and student views.

In fact, if you follow the dates in the report; the members of the committee were actually picked after the report was completed. This is just a relatively small example of the errors and oversights that riddle this report, these include the member selection process and the functioning of the committee.

The criteria used by this committee for deciding the cuts were reasonable access to facilities, availability of quality coaching, cultural relevance, community interests, impact on the varsity program, cost, availability of student athletes, ability to compete, student interest and ability to host home competitions.

The committee right from the original notion of its creation has been shrouded in a veil of secrecy. The student body could be informed about the committee only through personal leaks and rumors. This is certainly far from the idea of having decisions openly arrived at. Dr. R. Wallingford, member of the L.U. faculty and the ex-coach of the Track Team was seriously alarmed at the shady approach of handling this matter. "If this is a serious organization than it should be functioning openly and publicly!"

The leaked copy of the report made it to the office of Lambda. It shows very serious oversights in all aspects of its content. Rick Carleton, the coach of the Track team has no illusions about its relevance. "If it were a scientific study the results would be invalid and unreliable".

Yet, there are no illusions in the athletic world of L.U.. There were definite recommendations made to cut the Track team and evaluate the functioning of the Hockey team.

Mark Dewan, currently ranked 6th nationally in the 3000 m. is rather paranoid about the intentions of the athletic department. He was against protesting aggressively. "They're looking for a reason to cut our team", he stated without illusions.

The blatant aggression against the team and its members is not a novelty. The executive of the athletic department, has had an ax to grind with the track team for quite some time. There is little record of the personal politicking within the department. However, one recorded incident does illustrate the relations and the shape it has taken since.

In 1988, Peter Campbell was chosen to deal with the organizers of the World Junior Track & Field Championships over the man with the obvious credentials and talent to handle this job Ron Wallingford. Wallingford organized among others, the marathon in the 1976 Montreal Olympics. Instead results at the World Juniors were several hundred thousand dollars lost. It is clear that Campbell did not profit from it. However, this did not particularly injure Campbell's reputation. It did create the illusion that the sport of Track and Field is a wasted cause with a high price tag to prove it.

This illusion did not help now retired university coach Wallingford. Nor has it made the work of Carleton, the current L.U. Track coach, any easier. This illusion has also remained persistent in the report of the Athletic Advisory Committee.

Money Talks...Bullshit Walks!

by Glenn Scott

At the risk of sounding too bold, I feel I must come straight to the point with this editorial. Lambda needs your money! Throughout this last publishing year, the staff of Lambda has worked long and hard to ensure a quality student press. One that not only has something for everyone, but also one that can be left out on the kitchen table for mom to peruse. We have, by leaps and bounds become a more responsible student press, both financially and editorially. It is true that we cannot be expected to please all of the people all of the time, however we believe that our mandate has been well served this year.

Presently, each student member of the SGA contributes $10.00 to Lambda. This has been the case since 1987, when the student levy was increased from $7.50. Lambda is no different from any other department or organization in this university. As economic changes occur, we too are forced to cope with cutbacks, and pinched budgets. In a period of 6 years, Lambda has had to accommodate a fee increase by virtually everyone they deal with. The printer, stationary company, CUP fees, L.U. Bookstore, and Macintosh Computer Systems have all increased their rates, and are expected to do so again next year. The fact is that Lambda is feeling the crunch. We cannot be expected to give you what you want without a $5.00 increase to our levy.

This $5.00 increase that we are asking for is incomparable to other increases, increases that you have little or no control over (ie: tuition hikes). We are asking the students of the SGA to make their decision. Do you want a quality paper or not?

You may ask yourself, why should I give Lambda more money? What have they done for me? Well in order to answer that, I must give you an idea of what we are planning to do.

Lambda would like to head towards publishing twice a week. This process will be a very gradual one, however we would like to begin the process next fall. Our plan would be to publish one extra edition per month. This extra publication would be a features edition, where all editorial sections would be responsible for a specific feature. For example the News section might look at something like Racism, LGB, Women's Issues, etc. The Sports section might look at such things as a feature on the sports community of the Sudbury area, etc. Entertainment might choose a feature regarding the entertainment community of Laurentian. This extra edition would, in our eyes be a great success.

Lambda would also like to add to the paper's physical look. We would like to add more colour, super-impositions, photo's and graphics, however, these are expensive enhancements. The present cost of one Entertainment page is approximately $20-$25.

Our sports section is close behind that. The other sections are very interested in making their pages more attractive, but in order to do so we must have more money. We cannot be expected to better our image if we don't have the funds to do so.

We have also begun to explore ways in which to better service our upper-year undergrads, and graduate students. We realize that these students are looking for something specific in your paper. Lambda is committed to bettering the paper in order to service these student's needs.

Most of the Lambda staff positions are volunteer however there are a few that hold honourariums. These too have been frozen since 1987. We are currently the university's top employer of students, and with cutbacks in OSAP and other grants it is not only good, but essential that we offer students a chance to earn money, and get valuable work experience at the same time.

If the SGA board decides to allow Lambda on its voting ballot, it will be up to the SGA students as to whether or not Lambda should get this $5.00 increase in their levy. We can only promise you that Lambda will strive to be the best university press in Canada. We can only get better!

What has happened to Voyageurs hockey?

Recently my friends and I were sitting around the coat check, collecting coats of course, for another rambunctious night at the pub. In our boredom, the topic of Laurentian hockey came flooding to our minds. Whatever happened to it? We discussed the negative aspects of the Vees hockey that has created a plummeting effect... these topics included, weak support by the student body, POOR, POOR advertising for home games, and the placing of the Olympic sized ice rink in the south end !?! ... just to name a few.

Last night on the radio station 92.7 (where Sudbury rocks), it was mentioned that teams were going to be canned; one of these teams being the Voyageur men's hockey team. How does this make you feel? Angry, depressed, not worthy, or do you care at all?

It seems to me that this lack of interest in our hockey team and other sports, is a futile attempt at worthiness. Is your life so jam-packed with exciting events that you cannot make it out to just one home VEES HOCKEY GAME? Is it that difficult? Do you know how the hockey team is doing; do you care?

Hockey can be exciting if you just give it a chance. I'm not trying to preach to anyone, but on pure observation alone, it was noted, that there were more spectators at the SPAD tournament than there has been at all the VEES games put together.

I know it takes a lot to get out of bed, to turn off the T.V. and put down the popcorn to go to a Vees hockey game. You're not just going to a hockey game, you're getting some exercise and you're avoiding looking like one of those hobbits that live deep below the earth's surface. So, ... OKAY, OKAY, OKAY, maybe it's about time you did something out of the ordinary...try supporting the men's hockey team instead of heckling them. There's a lot of talent out there and it's time you catch a glimpse of it before it's gone for good!

Aids: Natives Have Low Awareness of the Disease: Study

From TWAM

An AIDS and lifestyle survey of Ontario Natives conducted by the University of Toronto and Native groups has found an alarmingly low awareness of the disease among Natives.

Published this month, the report found that 71 per cent of Ontario Natives were certain they would never get AIDS, although only 15 per cent of the men said they used condoms consistently.

Knowledge of AIDS and its prevention was lowest in the north, where 45 per cent of Natives had never heard of AIDS, compared to 17 per cent throughout the province.

"The findings suggest that the population of this study does have less knowledge of AIDS than the general population," said Ted Myers, an associate professor at U of T's department of health administration and director of the study.

The two-year, $400,000 study interviewed 658 residents from 11 reserves throughout Ontario. It was a collaboration between the university, individual Native treaty organizations, band councils, and health workers.

Myers said the results have raised concern over the potential for widespread transmission of AIDS in remote Native communities.

"As long as people have multiple sex partners, and safe sex is not being practiced, then the potential for the spread of the virus is there," he told reporters at a news conference.

Myers estimated that 212 people living on reserves have been infected by HIV—the virus that causes AIDS—but says the number could be higher because of a lack of testing.

"Less than half a per cent reported that they were HIV antibody positive," he said. "But in a population of 45,000, the number is not small."

Allan Roy, a director with the Chiefs of Ontario, says low awareness of AIDS in northern Native communities could be the result of having educational literature available only in English, and not in Ojibwa or Cree.

"As a result, many consider it a white man's disease, and part of a lifestyle of western society," he said.

Cathryn George, health director for the Association of Iroquois and Allied Indians, said she hopes the results of the study will pressure the government to act on its plans to develop "culturally sensitive" AIDS education programs for Native people.

"Our people are more concerned now because everything is documented. Our behaviour has to change and that doesn't happen overnight."

Roy says it will be a challenge to keep AIDS out of Native communities, but he's confident it's within the scope of community workers. He says the first step has already been taken by the researchers who were involved in the study.

Praising them for their "pioneer" approach, Roy said they went back to each community they studied and explained the results.

George said that was a welcome change.

"This report is different. In the past we've had researchers show up in our communities and never return with their findings, which are used in part to stigmatize the lifestyle of a proud people," she said.

Roy was also pleased with the success of the research collaboration between U of T and the Native organizations.

Although it's not the first time a university has worked with Native groups, he says it's one of the most successful.

"We had a chance to add aboriginal comments—our interpretations and perspectives—to the report every step of the way. It really represents a model for not only future activities at U of T, but possible to other universities in Canada," Roy said.

Myers said the study is an example of the need for further cross-cultural research. He commends the university for its initiative in participating in the project, but he believes that other universities should become involved as well.

"There needs to be more university support of faculty involvement in cross-cultural and community-based research because it's more time-consuming. But the need for this research must first be understood, and not all faculties have that understanding."

Development on Trial

by Léo Therrien
VIS Coordinator

We live in an age of global crisis. War, unemployment, poverty and hunger are everyday realities for most of the world's population. Approximately one billion people live in poverty. One fifth of the global population receives over 80% of the world's income, while the poorest receives 1.4%. Wealth is most concentrated among 20% of the people living in the world's seven richest countries.

When asked how this situation can be changed, one answer seems obvious: Development. For over fifty years, governments, organisations, churches and individuals in both the North and South have championed the goal of bringing about development. But development has different meanings for different people. For some, it means economic growth; for others, an end to poverty.

It is time to reexamine development in a rapidly changing world. That is why, to commemorate International Development Week (February 1 to 7), Village International Sudbury (VIS) organized a workshop entitled Development on Trial. It featured Brenda Rosenbaum from Guatemala, Director of Mayan Hands, a program to open markets for Mayan Indians working in artisan cooperatives in Guatemala and Mexico.

As you enjoy your coffee from Colombia or clothes from Guatemala, do you ever wonder...Who picked those beans? Who made that shirt? How much of my money reaches them? Do they really have a chance at a better life? Do we really have a choice in our trade with them?

As a global education centre and an alternative trading organisation, we at VIS feel it is important to raise awareness about the needs of Third World artisans, the importance of fair trade and the cultural and artistic value of their products. It is time to look at how we deal with Third World producers, the price we pay for their commodities and who benefits from that trade. We believe what we need is more fair trade not free trade! Development must serve the needs of humanity and the survival of the planet and not simply be the instruments with which the wealthy and powerful gain more wealth and power.

Laurentian Redefines its Priorities for the Next 30 Years

staff writer

"Laurentian University is a comprehensive university serving Northeastern Ontario. It is committed to bilingualism and dedicated to both teaching and research." This is the mission statement from Laurentian University's Strategic plan entitled, Leadership and Opportunity in the North.

The Strategic Plan is a document prepared by the President of the University, Dr. Ross Paul, in cooperation with the Strategic Plan Steering Committee. Its purpose is to establish a vision and priorities for Laurentian University to follow for the next 30 years.

Though they are the results of different processes, the Strategic plan and the Master Plan, prepared for the university by Castellan and Favot Architects Incorporated, are closely tied together.

The Master Plan is actually a physical site plan. It will drive future building construction and environmental preservation plans for the Laurentian campus. In an interview on the Strategic Plan, Dr. Ross Paul suggested that he hoped that be addressing some of the problems posed by the physical location of the buildings on campus, the plan would help to create a "common community" instead of "separate intellectual communities."

The Strategic Plan allows for a review of the current academic programs. This is likely to provide the most visible changes to Laurentian for students. The plan states that programs may be evaluated according to the new "mission and mandate" established by the plan itself. If the program is "no longer consistent with the University's mission," it may be eliminated. Dr. Paul suggested that with a clearly defined mission statement for the University, it will be "forced to defend programs within the terms of the Strategic Plan."

The impetus for creation of the Strategic Plan was a consensus in the University community that Laurentian is "stretching (itself) too thinly." This means that there must be a more efficient distribution of resources within the University. Otherwise, Laurentian will end up with many mediocre programs, rather than a few outstanding programs. Dr. Paul stated that "the worst thing we can do is nothing, everything sinks. We're picking priorities and going with the winners."

Among other issues touched on in the Strategic Plan are those of bilingualism and the federated College system. The plan commits the University to "services to Francophones," reaffirming the University's commitment to bilingualism.

As well, the plan provides for a committee to be established to study the effectiveness of the College system. The intention is to make the arrangement more facilitative to interaction between the College communities and the University at large.

As for the implementation of the plan, there are measures to ensure that it is used to drive decision making and short term planning. Dr. Paul argued that "one of the strengths of the plan is that it outlines who is responsible..." for carrying out the specific tasks delineated in the plan. As well, the President of the University is responsible to the "Board of Governors for the implementation of the plan. Dr. Paul recognized that he would be "accountable publicly a year later" for each year that the plan is in existence.

Currently, the Strategic Plan has been passed by the University Senate. It is now awaiting approval by the Laurentian University Board of Governors.

The Changing Face of Work

Judith Maxwell
Counseling and Resource Centre

Here are some of the tips gathered from speakers at the National Conference on Career Development in Ottawa, January 25 - 27 and from some new books on the topic. They may be helpful to you as you plan for your future.

Fifty percent of the work force does not work full-time for a single employer.

While the Fortune 500 have eliminated 4 million jobs since 1980, 12 million home based businesses have started up.

Companies will continue to downsize to a central core, farming out contract work to specialists.

People may have 7-9 jobs in a lifetime, often working for two or more employers.

There will be a strong growth of service businesses based on expertise.

There is more desire for autonomy and creative freedom.

We need to teach everyone how to act and think like an entrepreneur, to sell themselves, their expertise, to promote their talents.

Employees of a company will be consulted more by management on saving costs and improving quality.

Career development of employees within a company will be encouraged: employees can determine how and with what training they could improve their skills to contribute more.

In some cases, where reductions in salary are required, profit-sharing plans may offset this and give employees ownership in the firm.

The days of deciding on a single occupation and working at it the rest of your life seem to be over. Job security, if there ever was such a thing, is gone. The rate of change is too fast, not just in the workplace, but in the workers. Most do not want the same job forever, but prefer to take on new challenges, to develop new skills and to grow. People will be investing continually in their own training as well.

The most important abilities will be knowing how to learn, how to work with others as team members, how to research information and communicate it: in other words, all the skills university students groan about having to develop. Since most of you are computer literate, you already have another basic skill.

Whether you are selling the services of your enterprise or your own skills, it will be extremely important to develop a portfolio of achievements. This catalogue of transferable skills has always been the basis for a good resume. The portfolio is an extended and more detailed description of acquired skills. It will likely be accepted in the future for university and college credits if you want to take a second degree.

Another tip is that what are considered "Mcjobs" may offer the fastest track to management positions simply because you'll beat out the competition. Also, 60% of all job creation in the last two years has been in companies employing fewer than 20 people. Getting in on the ground floor of a fast growing company in medical technology, biomedical, communications, or computer software (who ever heard of Microsoft 15 years ago?) could be an exciting beginning to a great career. Home service businesses and mail order are also growing because families have less time to shop around.

It may be necessary and desirable in what is becoming a global market to develop a love for travel, because you may be moving from province to province or from country to country for the work you like best. Check out our Information Centre's sections on international jobs and check with Placement for the current openings abroad if you'd like to head off now.

I sometimes feel that some students are concerned about choosing their occupation because they have been led to believe that they will be stuck with that choice forever, so it had better be the right one. This look into the future should come as relief to those who fit this description. Your career is the ensemble of all the work, paid and unpaid, that you choose to do throughout your life. It is your choice as to who and what you want to be at any stage, within the necessary constraints of the job market. For instance, there is no longer a bright future for buggy whip or whalebone corset makers. Start daydreaming your future and then begin the solid research for planning for it.

NOTICE OF MEETING

to be held on

Friday, February 12, 1993

at 2 P.M.

in the

Senate/Board Room

Native Student Council

I am the new Native Student Counselor at Laurentian University. I come to Sudbury from Kapuskasing where I worked for Northern College as a teacher and counselor for over fourteen years. I also volunteered numerous years as a board member for the Kapuskasing local of the Ontario Native Women's Association and the Kapuskasing Native Friendship Centre. My mother was born and raised in Moose Factory, and although I have not lived there, I am a member of the Moose Factory First Nation.

Because of my personal experience, formal education, and work experience, I feel that I will be able to assist students in many ways; that is, from getting acquainted with the University to working on personal issues.

Please feel free to contact me at anytime to discuss how I can help your students or drop in at the Counseling and Resource Centre on the 2nd Floor of the Parker Building. I look forward to talking with you.

CFS/OFS Referendum Dropped

by Andy McKillican

A referendum regarding SGA membership in the Ontario Federation of Students and the Canadian Federation of Students will not be held according to a motion passed at SGA's Tuesday, February 2 board meeting.

A motion was passed to drop a motion passed by last year's SGA Board to give OFS and CFS six months notice that a referendum on membership would be held. Because this motion passed the next motion that appeared on the docket, requesting that the SGA Board follow through with the previous year's motion, was tabled indefinitely.

Upon discussion of the order of the motions, Ted Clarke, President of the SGA, informed the Board that motions are listed in the order that they are turned in to the Secretary in the SGA office.

Février: Mois de l'histoire du peuple noir

Le monde entier, les États-Unis d'Amérique en tête, reconnaît maintenant l'apport du peuple noir à l'histoire de l'humanité. En instituant "le mois de l'histoire du peuple noir", tout un passé fait de gloire, d'humiliations diverses, de sursauts et j'en passe, prend sa légitime place malgré un présent assez sombre.

Avant de parler du peuple noir, situons d'abord son origine géographique: l'Afrique. Historiquement, l'Afrique est le berceau de l'humanité comme en témoignent l'essor des bassins agricoles, les premières religions, ainsi que l'éblouissant art rupestre. Pendant la période appelée "ANTIQUITÉ", l'Afrique est encore, par l'Égypte, la locomotive et l'institutrice du monde: avec l'écriture, le pouvoir centralisé, les fameuses pyramides et l'architecture monumentale, les sciences. Ce fut l'une des cimes de l'histoire humaine comme le dit si bien Joseph Ki-Zerbo, grand historien africain de réputation internationale.

Or, l'on ne peut parler de l'Égypte sans parler de la Nubie est ses prolongements au delà du Sahara. Le rôle du Nil qui est à l'origine du développement de toute la vallée est très important à souligner. Les principaux royaumes indiquant les performances de l'homme africain Kouch, la Nubie, Aksum, le Tekrou, le Ghana, le Kanem. On pourrait encore citer le Mali, l'Éthiopie, les royaumes Yorouba, Haoussa, les empires du Bénin et de Gao, les royaumes Kongo, Luba, Lunda et celui du grand Zimbabwe. On pourrait également parler des collectives à pouvoir non-centralisé dont l'exemple frappant les groupes humains (Bwami) de la forêt du Maniema (Zaïre) qui ont initié les institutions des chefferies. Rien que ces quelques exemples pour éclairer la lanterne de ceux qui se posent encore des questions à propos du "continent noir".

D'aucuns penseront: quelle relation y-a-t-il entre ces prestigieux royaumes et l'état actuel des membres de la communauté noire où qu'ils se trouvent? Plusieurs tentatives de réponses fournies seront développées tout au long de ce mois.

Joseph Ki-Zerbo situe la fracture historique avec l'apparition de Portugais Diaz et ensuite Vasco de Gama dans l'océan indien à la recherche de "chrétiens et d'épices", au XVe. Le mode de production capitaliste sous tendu par les armées à feu a eu comme résultat l'accélération des processus, la décomposition et la tribalisation des espaces socio-politiques antérieures, la saignée démographique due à la traite des noirs. Ainsi naquit la diaspora noire à travers le monde et la colonisation ne fut plus qu'une question de logique!

ÉDITORIAL La semaine "Carny"

rédacteur-adjoint français

En tant qu'étudiant de la Laurentienne je fus très déçu de la semaine "Carny" de l'SGA. Je la nomme SGA car elle n'est pas, selon ses membres français, ce qu'elle dit qu'elle est, une association bilingue.

Si vous, les francophones, avez participé à la semaine du carnaval et non la semaine "carny", vous vous êtes sûrement aperçu qu'il y a eu très peu d'activités francophones pendant le carnaval de l'A.G.E. Ce qui vient à demander la question: "Qu'a fait l'A.G.E./S.G.A. pour ses membres francophones?" Pour être juste, il faut dire que les affiches étaient en français, ou plutôt en partie. De plus, il y eut un groupe francophone "En Bref" qui jouait au pub jeudi, de la semaine du carnaval, sauf que la publicité pour "En bref" fut presque nulle!

En fait, il y a eu très très peu d'activités francophones qui ont été organisées par l'Association Générale des Étudiants. La raison pour ce manque me fut expliqué par Leslie Cathers, la vice-présidente des affaires bilingues de l'A.G.E.

Il paraît qu'il n'y a que 20% des membres de l'A.G.E./S.G.A. qui sont francophones. La vice-présidente des affaires bilingues m'a dit qu'elle n'a eu que 2 réponses au sondage qu'elle a donné au Lambda et à l'Original déchainé (qui n'a pas publié le sondage). Mais l'A.G.E./S.G.A. auront des disques compactes pour le "Pub", malheureusement ils ne peuvent pas avoir des films français pour "Voyageur Vidéo". Par contre, l'association essaie de son mieux en ayant un comité de bilinguisme (avec 4 membres). De plus, tout le monde, dans le bureau, doit parler en français chaque jeudi.

Mais il faut dire que le problème majeur est que l'association n'est pas considérée comme bilingue par ses membres. Et même Leslie Cathers m'a avoué que le monde ne considère pas l'association comme vraiment bilingue. Et le problème ne sera pas résolu jusqu'à ce que les membres du conseil même se déniaient. Si eux ne croient pas que l'association est bilingue comment veulent-ils que leur membres le croient?

Je n'essaie pas d'abaisser l'A.G.E./S.G.A., au contraire je veux savoir ce qui se passe dans cette association! Il est vrai que la francophonie à l'A.G.E./S.G.A. est une minorité, mais quand même!! Ne devrait-il pas y avoir des activités francophones pour cette minorité? Il faut arrêter de dire que les activités sont pour tous. Car nous savons très bien que la tension entre français et anglais existe toujours. Donc, dire que toutes les activités sont ni françaises ni anglaises causent de plus grands problèmes, car les deux groupes ne s'entendent pas! Alors, la meilleure solution serait-elle de séparer les français et les anglais jusqu'à ce qu'ils apprennent à vivre ensemble ???

Le jour E, ou le jour de l'extase olfactive

Après avoir bannis la cigarette des arènes, de plus en plus de villes canadiennes se tournent maintenant vers de nouveaux champs de bataille: les restaurants et les bars. Eh oui! Peut-être bientôt sera-t-il possible d'aller manger ou danser sans avoir à supporter la diabolique fumée. Ne serait-il pas merveilleux que vos vêtements au retour d'une soirée ne sentent que le détergent, plutôt que d'être empestés par la fumée? Ne serait-il pas merveilleux de pouvoir apprécier le parfum de l'être convoité plutôt que, le nez dérangé, de vous en priver? En vérité je vous le dis ce jour d'extase olfactive est peut-être arrivé... le paradis sur terre pour les non-fumeurs!

Bien évidemment et fort malheureusement, les fumeurs ne voient pas cette nouvelle bataille d'un très bon oeil. Après une amère défaite en ce qui a trait aux arènes, ils n'accepteront pas d'emblée de se voir priver de ce qui est, selon leur dire, un plaisir. Les amants de la cigarette s'indignent en effet de voir leur droit de fumer brimé. Selon eux, il serait contraire à la Charte des Droits et Libertés du Canada d'empêcher quiconque de fumer dans un endroit particulier.

De prime abord, on ne peut que leur donner raison, cependant en y réfléchissant un peu on s'aperçoit qu'il s'agit là d'un raisonnement pour le moins boiteux. En effet, toute personne a le droit d'agir comme bon lui semble sur ce qui ne touche que sa personne, mais en est-il de même si ses agissements affectent autrui d'égal ou même de pire façon? Vous conviendrez avec moi que tous devraient avoir un mot à dire sur ce qui les concerne, n'est-ce pas?

Le monde étant malheureusement imparfait, la fumée s'échappant d'une cigarette ne choisit pas sa victime; elle se promène au gré du vent jusqu'aux nez environnants. Ceux-ci absorbant tout ce qui leur passe sous le nez (c'est le cas de le dire) inhalent malencontreusement l'infâme polluant et le reflètent ensuite aux poumons. Ces derniers étant des organes sans pouvoir de décision se voient obligés d'absorber 4000 produits chimiques toxiques dont au moins 50 substances cancérogènes reconnues. (Protégez-vous, sept. 1990) Inutile de préciser que cette fumée pour le moins nuisible ne peut avoir qu'une influence néfaste sur la santé d'un organisme avoisinant la cheminée, peu importe si cet organisme est intoxiqué ou non. Donc, la cigarette affecte aussi bien les fumeurs que les non-fumeurs.

Or, n'avions-nous pas convenu que si les non-fumeurs sont affectés par la cigarette ils ont un mot à dire sur la question? Et bien voilà les mots que les non-fumeurs disent: "les fumeurs n'ont aucunement le droit de détériorer notre santé sans notre approbation". Plusieurs se diront ici que j'exagère et que mon argumentation est tirée par les cheveux... Considérez ceci: quand un désastre écologique survient ou qu'une substance toxique menace notre santé, nous nous indignons, inquiétons, crions à l'injustice, exigeons des compensations, etc. Il s'agit de réactions tout à fait normales et justifiées, alors n'en est-il pas de même dans le cas des fumeurs menaçant délibérément la santé de tous???

Alors que les fumeurs crient à l'injustice quand leur droit (qui n'en est surtout pas un) d'intoxiquer les gens est brimé... Ah!!! Une crise existentielle apparaîtra chez les fumeurs le jour où il sera défendu de fumer dans les restaurants et les bars: rester à la maison, fumer et réduire son espérance de vie, ou sortir, s'amuser et aider sa santé. Bien grand dilemme que celui-là, bien plus grand certes que celui des non-fumeurs: rester à la maison, s'ennuyer mais protéger sa santé, ou sortir, s'amuser et détériorer sa santé. La question est de savoir quel droit prime, le droit de fumer ou le droit à la santé...

In The Dark

I know that Carney Week was over last week, but I do have one residual thought about it. This thought comes to mind because the cause is still around; it's those posters advertising Carney. Who the hell drew those up? I've never seen such an ugly poster as that, I could draw something better. It looks like a 1960's ad. You want a poster that people will want to steal, an attractive poster stimulates interest while the one we had stimulates nothing. I don't want a poster with bikini babes on it, just one that is visually more pleasing, that's all.

Why do people write on wash-room walls? I think it has to do with the fact that humans, when they sit down to do get down to business, have a compulsion to read and if there is nothing to read, they write. The problem is most of the writing is closely related to what is coming out of the other end of the body, that's right SHIT.

Articles in Lambda lately relate to racism being alive at Laurentian. I'll tell you that I didn't have to read Lambda to find that out. Almost any stall on campus will do. Anglos, francos, whites, Italians, Sikhs, blacks, etc. nobody is safe. Another thing about washrooms why do some men feel the need to write homosexual material on the walls?

Why do they wash the graffiti off? Because occasionally the stuff on the walls is actually entertaining. Sure, you have to know which stalls to go to, but it does help pass the time. That is when you should wash the walls or paint them over. Maybe they should put paper on the walls, then you could write all you want. When the content gets stale, tear it down and put up some more.

Hey, I was looking through a pile of junk in my room and discovered an article I wrote before the winter exams. It dealt with my predictions for the new year. There are a few that have come true so far.

1. Charles and Diana split up
2. Cowboys win
3. Will snow in January
4. Iron curtain will crumble along with Berlin Wall
5. Postage will go up, (this is a gimme because it does every year)

About postage going up, if it does not stop soon it will be cheaper to hand deliver a letter than to mail it. You know, I like to live on the edge, so every so often I put a letter in the mail without a stamp. Crazy, huh? Here's the best part, it goes through! That will teach them. And just to piss them off, I will use a red envelope for Valentine's Day. I know it slows down the mail because the computer cannot read the address, but hell, if I get magazines for January in February I can wait another month.

Back to predictions. Here are a few that have not happened but should happen soon.

1. Cindy Crawford and Kathy Ireland get into a fist fight over who gets to go on a "dream date" with me.
2. After "dream date" with winner of the fist fight, In The Dark columnist is killed and mutilated by girlfriend (killed is an exaggeration, mutilation is not)
3. Pub goes topless (everybody)
4. PGA makes golf a contact sport
5. Megadeth, Metallica, Slayer and several other metal bands confess that they are in fact the same group of people.
6. Aladdin wins the best picture Oscar
7. Sienfield is switched to a new time (OOPS, should be in the first part, damn I'm good)
8. I will pass the English competency test
9. Maybe not
10. One plus one will not longer equal two.

Reality Check

by Prisoner of Reality

They're everywhere ...sitting beside you in class, standing in line at the Pub, walking the stacks in the Library. Damn, some of them even follow you into the washrooms! What?!? You don't realize who I'm talking about? Brace yourself; I'm talking about Amateur Psychologists. You know, the ones who come to you when you seem down and say, 'What's wrong, Prisoner? Do you want to talk? Maybe I can help.'

Now the difference between true friends and these Witless Wonders is that true friends will leave you alone if you tell them you don't want to talk. The other jerks will stick to your side like Great Hall gravy and badger you till you do one of two things: 1) actually tell them what's on your mind or 2) take them outside, rip their hearts out with your teeth and feed it to them. Unfortunately, either option has the same end result: You still have a problem and they still want to talk you through it.

You see, I don't mind talking about my problem (I only have one!) I really don't. What I do mind is these jerks diagnosing my mental health when they are looped to begin with. According to Amateur Psychologists, everyone on the planet is mentally unstable and they are the ones who will save the world from itself. But, after doing many a Reality check, I have discovered that all of the Amateur Psychologists are neurotic, paranoid, pill-popping hypochondriacs who don't have a life. They gorge themselves on the misery of others like leeches on blood; their lives are so empty they have to hear other people's problems, exaggerate them in their own small minds and assure themselves that everyone else is a bomb waiting to go off and they're ok.

So, in closing, I would like to send out a warning to all Amateur Psychologists. If an acquaintance seems down, but tells you they don't want to talk, leave quietly and quickly. This is especially true to all my Amateur Psychologists. Don't bother me, get off my back and get out of my face. Otherwise, Option 2 will be the only option I'll have at my disposal.

RECIPE #7

Lemon Chicken

Preparation time: 15 minutes
Cooking time: 30 minutes
Serves two

Preheat broiler.

Place in a casserole dish:
2 pieces chicken (breasts, legs, etc.)

Pour:
1/2 cup (80 mL) lemon juice
over chicken.

Add:
2 cloves garlic, peeled and finely chopped
2 tsp. (10 mL) oregano

Place under broiler for 15 minutes.

Turn, baste and return to oven for another 15 minutes.

Helpful Hints:
• Chicken should not be too close to broiler, but about seven inches (17.5 cm) away. The juices from the meat tend to splatter and can cause a fire.
Lemon juice flamé is quite another recipe.

There are times when society relieves its frustrations on those who permeate the facades of humanity. Those conditioned with elaborate responses and rhetoric may survive for a short while. None are immune from the violent finger pointing of those who have deemed themselves responsible and superior for all facets of existence.

Do they realize there are fingers pointed in their direction? Do they realize their inbred insecurities nurtured by parents who hold the hypocritical consciences of their parents. Living a false lifestyle and judging the world and its inhabitants with pre-set ideas of standard, "normal" life is what eventually leads these unfortunates to their destruction.

The world is littered with a faction of greed motivated bureaucrats who control all and who have no remorse when dealing with minor insurrections. Blood always follows blood, for as soon as the insurrection is disposed of, those in the bureaucracy who allowed the insurrection to occur will also be eradicated.

These are great processes of work higher taxes will be implemented to manage the overhead. The large houses with the gardeners plucking violets for afternoon cocktails are filled with the decadence dream of liberated society. They do not cover vast distances of mild neglect, they create neglect as a means of controlling the television viewers who take account of the neglect that arises from bureaucratic thoughtlessness.

Today people are content to watch the spoils of greed and the bloodthirsty vagrants who control this insipid resumption of death. There are means of controlling them. Revolution is the easiest. Destroy the government and kill all those who contain the threads of power. Kill their children and all remnants of disease they have spread. Now, once this is done, who will commence the new government and not be corrupted with the excesses of unlimited power.

"What religion you say is lost without exemption, breathe the wind of a world that spins on the axis of man's reflection."

There is a martyr in every child's eye, from the parent that feeds and defends its life from the vultures and sharks that thrive on meaningless conversion and young blood. Throwing a few pieces of flesh to content the scum who lavish in the destruction of morality will only prolong the pain of society, if, it breathes the wind long enough to ascertain what is truly occurring. λ

Welcome back, dear comic fans. Sorry, I've been unavailable for the past few issues. I was practicing my Pub Etiquette Rules. But, I'm back now, with a load of new stuff happening.

Superman is returning (Big Surprise!!). His comeback is slated for mid-April in adventures of Superman #500. Four people will come forth, claiming to be Supes: a cyborg, a super-powered vigilante, a teenager and a high-tech-armored steelworker who was buried during Supes' final battle. This issue will be published in two formats: a collector's edition (polybagged with neat stuff included) and a newsstand edition (nothing special). What should be the most interesting thing is Supes' new character. Hopefully, he won't be such a swell 1940's-kind-of-guy.

Ever catch 'Bob', that TV show about a comic artist whose '60's character, Mad Dog, is revived? Well, Marvel Comics is releasing a Mad Dog series, not based on the TV show, but on the character. There will be two versions of Mad Dog: a campy 60's style comic written and illustrated by Ty Templeton and a darker, modern Wolverine-like series written by Evan Dorkin. Mad Dog will be released as a six-issue mini-series; if it does well, Marvel could bring it back as a mini-series or even an ongoing series. The first issue is scheduled for mid-March.

If you've been waiting for the next issue of the Overstreet Comic Book Update, you'll be waiting quite a while. The CBU is no more. As of February, CBU is combining with another magazine Comic Book Marketplace to become Overstreet's Comic Book Marketplace. It will have the most up-to-date and accurate price guide (cards & comics), important market tips and articles & features by nationally acclaimed experts in the comics field. Some issues will also have trading cards and posters included. Should be interesting.

In The Dark

I know that Carney Week was over last week, but I do have one residual thought about it. This thought comes to mind because the cause is still around; it's those posters advertising Carney. Who the hell drew those up? I've never seen such an ugly poster as that, I could draw something better. It looks like a 1960's ad. You want a poster that people will want to steal, an attractive poster stimulates interest while the one we had stimulates nothing. I don't want a poster with bikini babes on it, just one that is visually more pleasing, that's all.

Why do people write on wash-room walls? I think it has to do with the fact that humans, when they sit down to do get down to business, have a compulsion to read and if there is nothing to read, they write. The problem is most of the writing is closely related to what is coming out of the other end of the body, that's right SHIT.

Articles in Lambda lately relate to racism being alive at Laurentian. I'll tell you that I didn't have to read Lambda to find that out. Almost any stall on campus will do. Anglos, francos, whites, Italians, Sikhs, blacks, etc. nobody is safe. Another thing about washrooms why do some men feel the need to write homosexual material on the walls?

Why do they wash the graffiti off? Because occasionally the stuff on the walls is actually entertaining. Sure, you have to know which stalls to go to, but it does help pass the time. That is when you should wash the walls or paint them over. Maybe they should put paper on the walls, then you could write all you want. When the content gets stale, tear it down and put up some more.

Hey, I was looking through a pile of junk in my room and discovered an article I wrote before the winter exams. It dealt with my predictions for the new year. There are a few that have come true so far.

1. Charles and Diana split up
2. Cowboys win
3. Will snow in January
4. Iron curtain will crumble along with Berlin Wall
5. Postage will go up, (this is a gimme because it does every year)

About postage going up, if it does not stop soon it will be cheaper to hand deliver a letter than to mail it. You know, I like to live on the edge, so every so often I put a letter in the mail without a stamp. Crazy, huh? Here's the best part, it goes through! That will teach them. And just to piss them off, I will use a red envelope for Valentine's Day. I know it slows down the mail because the computer cannot read the address, but hell, if I get magazines for January in February I can wait another month.

Back to predictions. Here are a few that have not happened but should happen soon.

1. Cindy Crawford and Kathy Ireland get into a fist fight over who gets to go on a "dream date" with me.
2. After "dream date" with winner of the fist fight, In The Dark columnist is killed and mutilated by girlfriend (killed is an exaggeration, mutilation is not)
3. Pub goes topless (everybody)
4. PGA makes golf a contact sport
5. Megadeth, Metallica, Slayer and several other metal bands confess that they are in fact the same group of people.
6. Aladdin wins the best picture Oscar
7. Sienfield is switched to a new time (OOPS, should be in the first part, damn I'm good)
8. I will pass the English competency test
9. Maybe not
10. One plus one will not longer equal two.

Letter from a Daughter

Dear Mother and Dad:

It has been three months since I left for college. I have been remiss in writing and I am very sorry for my thoughtlessness in not having written before. I will bring you up to date now. But, before you read, please sit down. OK?

Well then, I am getting along pretty well now. The skull fracture and the concussion I got when I jumped out of the window of my dormitory when it caught on fire shortly after my arrival are pretty well healed now. I only spent two weeks in the hospital, and now I can see almost normally and get sick headaches only once in a while.

Fortunately, the fire in the dormitory and my jump were witnessed by an attendant at the gas station near the dorm, and he was the one who called the fire department and the ambulance. He also visited my at the hospital, and since I had nowhere to live because of the burned out dorm, he was kind enough to invite me to share his apartment with him. It is really a basement room, but it is kind of cute. He is a very fine boy and we have fallen deeply in love, and are planning to get married. We haven't set the date yet, but it will be before my pregnancy begins to show.

Yes, Mother and Dad, I am pregnant. I know how much you are looking forward to being grandparents, and I know you will welcome the baby and give it the same love and devotion and tender care that you gave me when I was a child. The reason for the delay in our marriage is that my boyfriend has some minor infection which prevents us from passing our pre-marital blood-tests, and I carelessly caught it from him. This will soon clear with the penicillin injections I am now taking daily.

I know you will welcome him into our family with open arms. He is kind, and although not well-educated, he is ambitious. Although he is of a different race and religion than ours, I know your often expressed tolerance will not permit you to be bothered by the fact his skin colour is somewhat darker than ours. I am sure you will love him as I do. His family background is good too, for I am told that his father is an important gun-bearer in the village in Africa from which he comes.

Now that I have brought you up to date, I want to tell you that there was no dormitory fire; I did not have a concussion nor a skull fracture; I was not in the hospital; I am not pregnant; I am not engaged; I do not have syphilis; and there is no one in my life. However, I am getting a D in History and an F in Science, and I wanted you to see these marks in their proper perspective. Your loving daughter,
Kim

The wind is fluctuating to the north in synchronized formations. The sun has fallen to sleep and the moon illuminates the long strands of the water's waves. They slide like a blanket upon the base of black. It seems hard to realize the depth of the water only forty feet out. Everything appears to be tranquil, except for the

The child towards whom her life was devoted has run away, a teenager in a confused state. When she found that her daddy had perished in the war she just ran and ran. Running from all the bad, and confronting and questioning the goodness of Christ our Lord. The tears trickle down her virgin skin and crumble to the sand. She believes, (as I do), that you die a little each day. Life is not a sequence of doors but a wall. Society and reason is on the other side. "Now I will crucify all of God's messiahs, and make Him realize the pain he has given me", she says.

Disappearing from the earth is her goal. Her long, confident strides lead her to the end of the planet. She hangs her feet over the edge and wonders how long it will take for her body to reach the next place. The deepest thoughts now flow like the spear through the side of Christ as she touches her conceptions. A small boy, no more than four sits beside her. He has the pronunciation of a genius. Speaking in a deep voice, "Our world is structured in such a way that things can happen suddenly. The human race soothes themselves into imagining sudden change as something that happens outside the normal order of things. An accident, like a car crash. Or beyond our control, like a fatal illness. They do not conceive of sudden, radical, irrational change as built into the fabric of existence. Yet it is, and chaos teaches us that straight linearity, which we have come to take for granted, from physics to fiction, simply does not exist. Linearity is an artificial way of viewing the world. Real life isn't a series of interconnected events occurring one after another like beads strung on a necklace. Life is actually a series of encounters in which one event may change those that follow in a wholly unpredictable, even devastating way." There was a long and heartfelt pause for what seemed like an eternity, and then he concluded that this was simply the structure of our universe.

Needless to say the boy disappeared and she was left alone, engulfed in her decision. "I do not deserve what has been thrown at me, and I, like Christ, am a victim of You, God. You killed your only son and now You kill me. If I am a person of strong and genuine afflictions, then I will rise, but if I am a miserable wench, then may I be cast aside and thrown by Hitler's side." Never had there been such a cry for help. This girl needed guidance. No one was there for her. All she had was a little boy in her dreams. Maybe that was all she needed, but it was just an illusion.

Her features shattered against the rocks. Picasso couldn't even interpret what kind of art this was. Her vermillion flowed and gave the cracks in the rocks something to comfort their rough edges.

Her eyes, though separated from her face, cried.

Their blood flowed together. Him dead, her going. They shared so many things. Fights were inevitable although intentions were genuine. The three years in which they collaborated were to continue until marriage bonded them together forever. Love illuminated and resounded in every solitary pore.

Helplessly trapped in an incident that will change everything. Clawing for freedom, she cracks her "Lee Press-Ons" resulting in more blood; a young woman who had life on the souls of her shoes; the one God made, now trapped in her own fate. This reminds me of the little child in my baby-sitting days asking me, "If God is so good, why did he take my mother away?" Well, I believe that God deliberately fucked up the lives of these people because he is not there. Prove to me that there is a God and I'll be the first one to drink his blood and eat his body.

Oh well, there she is. What do you think is going through her distorted mind? Is she looking over at her boyfriend, lifting her bloody, nearly severed head and kissing him? Or is she witnessing the departure of his spirit from his body, (like in one of those silly fucking cartoons that make death so amusing?) Is she laughing now? Crying? Dead? She doesn't know.

It's funny that someone like Billy Joel can sum it up better than any Bible. He says, "Only the good die young." Why couldn't he take someone like me instead of someone who has a better than average chance to contribute significantly to the society in which we are all so helplessly bonded?

Ah, fuck it. I heard once that if you think too much you will end up knowing something. Then the process of rebelling occurs and as we all know, this is not tolerated. So let's just sink into this Jim Kelly want-to-be world, crack the seal on that Premium Whisky and think of things that might have been.

Chosen sixth overall by the Blackhawks in 1989, Bennett finished his career in Sudbury in 1991. He played all of last year with the Indianapolis Ice of the International Hockey League. This season, he's played in a dozen games with Chicago but has spent most of the season with the Ice.

"Adam told me he really enjoyed Sudbury and that had a big effect on my coming here. Sometimes when we talk on the phone he'll say, 'Pas, I wish I was back in university like you are. It must be great. They have so many rules up here.' That makes me realize I'm in good shape."

Pasma has contributed a few points in the 500 season being enjoyed by one of the best Laurentian hockey teams in years. He's dismayed by the prospect that the team may fold by next season but holds out hope that it will continue.

"Hockey's such a big part of Canadian culture. It's our game and it would be hard to believe that a university in Sudbury wouldn't have a team. I hope we keep it going here."

With the Vees on their way to the playoffs the play of Rod Pasma will be a vital factor in how far this team goes.

Aqua Vees out for Best Times

Hey, if you live in the Ottawa area, and saw the women on the 13th and 14th, come out and see the men swim on the 20th and 21st at the Ottawa pool: finals start at 6:30pm.

The Laurentian Men's Aquatic Voyageurs looked to have a lock on repeating or doing better on their sixth place finish last year. However, the team suffered some losses of swimmers to academics and other things, such as illness. Yes, the dreaded mono virus struck the team where it hurts. Dave Chisholm, a double bronze medalist at CIAV's last year came down with the virus two weeks ago and his season is hanging by a thread. Dave will make the trip however as a relay swimmer and cheerleader.

Campbell "Angus" Hastings hopes to battle it out to repeat on his bronze medal in the glamour event for swimming, the fifty freestyle. He also hopes to qualify for CIAV's for the fourth time in his career. Other swimmers to watch out for are: Dan Van Vemendahl; look for him in the 1,500 freestyle and 400 m. He is easy to spot with his sidekick Bob hairdo.

Talking about hairdo's Andrew Galbraith will be looking to qualify for CIAV's and an OUAA medal in the breaststrokes. Hoping to reach the same goals as Galbraith is Chris "Jose" Barnes, who hopes to create as much heat in the pool as he did in Lambda a couple weeks ago.

Gerry "Gerois Solé" Paterson hopes to repeat his top sixteen finishes he enjoyed last year. Gerois had a shaky first half of the season, but, is on the comeback trail, which for Gerry includes the 50, 100, & 200 freestyles.

Tommy Cuomo (aka Tom Wormald) has managed to keep himself relatively injury free to give him a shot at regaining his Top 16 form in the 200 butterfly and maybe the 200 backstroke.

Two time member of Canada's national triathlon team Rob "Robaire" Campbell is on a mission to finish the 1,500 freestyle in under 18 minutes a tough task.

Jon "The Yank" Cole has recovered from a shoulder problem to put himself into a position where he could possibly finish top 16 in the 400 m.

Chris "Vanilla" Barnes has more than pride on the line in his 50, 100, & 200 freestyles, particularly the 100 freestyle.

The men can field a relay or two that could crack the medals. They missed out last year by fractions of seconds.

The men wish to women luck and hope to see some. The Laurentian Student Body at the Ottawa pool on the 20th and 21st.

Lady Aquavees Looking For Best Showing Ever

Do you live in the Ottawa area? Looking for some quality entertainment this weekend? Well stop by at the Carleton University pool at 6:30 pm both Saturday 13th and Sunday 14th for the finals at the OWIAA swimming championship.

The women's team although smaller than last year is more potent. The swimmer to watch out for will definitely be rookie Nancy Sweetnam. Nancy has gone 31-0 in dual meet competition and has won a pair of gold medals and a silver in a Canada Cup meet earlier this year. She is ranked in the top of the world in a couple of events (both IM's). Nancy has broken records 26 times this year, not counting relay records. Nancy will definitely be a threat to extend her winning record.

Jody Nicholson and double bronze medalist at last year's OWs is another Laurentian swimmer that will definitely crack the top 8 and is someone to watch for at the finish. Why? Jody has the ability to race and push the pace in her distance events in order to wear down the competition, while rejecting the message of pain her body is sending her.

At OWIAA's, the top 16

swimmers score points and Laurentian has a few more girls that could get second swims. (The top 16 finishers in the morning swims go for it again in the 6:30 evening swims.)

Lisa Trahan is one of them. Lisa is enjoying one of her best seasons despite suffering from a shoulder problem almost the whole season. She has shut out the pain to enable herself to have a shot at 3 top finishes in her events (50 and 100 butterfly and 50 freestyle).

Lianne "Archie" Archambault has improved by leaps and bounds this year to give herself shots at second swims in the 100, 200, and 400 meter freestyles.

Rookie Trish "Flossie"

Hawkes looks like she will get 3 second swims as well, with exponential improvements throughout the season. Look for her in the grueling 100 & 200 meter butterflies and the 400 IM.

Two other rookie women are also looking to finish in the top 16 are Tonya Dun (50, 100 & 200 freestyle) and Kerrilee McLeod (200, 400 & 800 freestyle).

With the combination of these women it looks like there could be some new school records set in relays and chances for a top 3 finish are not that farfetched.

So, if you're looking for some good entertainment, put on a Laurentian shirt and show up at the Carleton pool & yell your guts out for the women's Aquatic Vees!

The process for evaluating the teams has been set up either through serious incompetence and negligence or deliberate malice against the track team and a number of other teams.

Part of the committee's research was based on criteria set for ranking of the athletic teams at L.U.. This is outlined under process, on page 4 of the secret report. There was a total score possible of 100 points. Certain weight was given to 10 criteria.

Reasonable access to the training and competition facility was given 18 points. However the notion of "reasonable" was not clearly defined. It is not clear if a team with good access to the facilities gets points while the teams with poor access to facilities or a total lack of them is compensated in their performance for the lack of them. In that case the Track team should have received above the 18 points for the purpose of compensating their performance level in competition.

The maximum of 18 points was given to the availability of coaching as well. Unfortunately only one track coach is affordable. Yet, the large diversification of the sport requires a sprint coach, throwing coach, jumping coach and a distance coach. Rick Carleton specializes in the distances. That leaves three other areas poorly coached. One individual simply cannot do all that successfully. Therefore such teams should be compensated by having an above 18 points scored in their performance.

A great deal of consistency in favoring the basketball teams is shown by the committee in setting the criteria of cultural relevance. It was given only a maximum of two points. The assured high ranking of Hockey would be a detriment to the Basketball teams! Unfortunately, only a few errors can be exposed because of the limited space of this article.

The selection of this committee is also questionable in a number of areas. Firstly who has selected these people? Secondly, it is unclear on what basis were Mark Green, Jean Warwic, Joan Mantle and Esko Vainio recruited? Was it accurate for them to recruit these members to represent the community? Their credentials remain a hazy maze of probable personal prejudice.

Shockingly, there was a total absence of direct input of student athletes on the committee. This is a blatant error.

The greater evidence of deliberate negligence is in the fact that in coming up with these figures the reports of Ken Sidney, the Cross Country Ski coach and Rick Carleton's report were not taken into consideration. Carleton was hospitalized at the time, while Sidney's results were neglected because he did not rank all the sports. One can see the logic in Sidney's decision, since it is rare that a specialist in one sport can make a truly expert decision on another. Carleton calculated that results may have been altered by as much as 12%-16%. "Much more if we took a biased approach".

Finally one major aspect was totally omitted. The cost per each athlete on the team was left out. Figures after all are factual summation of who are the biggest spenders.

The Track team receives a total of $6000 for its budget. Like the Hockey team, the Track team raised another 100% to bolster the budget and competed successfully, despite the fiscal handicap. The Hockey team began to show improvements as well. Yet both teams futures are uncertain at best and tragic at worst.

It is evident that there is ideological bias arising as well. Gender parity is an issue. The Hockey team has an obvious disadvantage: they simply won't change their sex. Furthermore their reputation for brawling and heavy partying is also a burden.

The track team might have an easier time with gender parity. After all there have been three OWIAA medals and one CIAU medal from the women.

It's evident that the two Peters want to strengthen their basketball teams. It seems Laurentian will become a commercialized basketball camp. It is unclear where their motivation will lead from there? Potentially this is about monopolizing the athletic budget pie. In the mean time, their personal goals run directly in conflict with the Track team, Hockey team, Cross-country team and... it is not known where it will end. The stakes are real, and the student athletes have the most to lose.

It is evident that the committee and the executive of the Athletic department are not interested in genuinely benefiting the teams or the athletes involved. Instead, draconian cuts are de rigueur. The Athletic Department making budgetary cuts is not a sign of fiscal responsibility but a symptom of poor administrative planning. It should serve as a resource centre for the teams on how they can organize better, raise funds and attract corporate sponsors to supplement their existing budget. Instead the Athletic department is synonymous with the ax men.

Instead, the SGA executive has been blind to all of this. Like on many issues they choose the comfortable approach of occupying their offices instead of acting on this blatant oversight. Cutting down on athletic diversity is definitively not their priority. Choosing executive rings commemorating their term of office is their latest high priority. In the case of Simon Chapelle the V.P. External, he is too busy preparing for the elections.

Questions also have to be asked where is it that the track coaches and hockey coaches have been up to this point. It seems that they did not work constructively until the crisis came along. It is they who that should have been on the front line of maintaining healthy environments for their teams.

Under these conditions of neglect and manipulation, it is blatantly appalling to see the basketball teams travel to competitions in buses with color TV's while the track team takes 17 people in a 15 people van to the track meets. The hypocrisy is appalling!
